Dear reader,

Here is the new issue of the Revista Paranaense de Desenvolvimento, this time featuring the dossier “Structure and Dynamics Paraná’s Economy”, organized by Professor Alexandre Alves Porsse from the Federal University of Paraná. Professor Alves holds a PhD in Economics, with an extensive production covering several fields of regional economics, including works using input-output matrix techniques. Compiled with the collaboration of several authors, the topics addressed in the dossier focus on different aspects of Paraná’s economy.

As a complement to this RPD issue, the articles by Igor Zanoni Constant Carneiro Leão and by Reshad Tawfeiq bring an analytical approach to development in view of the current conjuncture. The first study proposes a perception of the evolution of the so-called modes of production based on the Chinese and Russian experiences. The second study, in turn, advocates a broader perspective to the essential objectives of development, taking a further step toward the understanding of human development.

Enjoy your reading!
